

IFSL YOU Multi-Asset Blend Growth Fund

Accumulation - GBP

Objective

The objective of the Fund is to increase the value of its investments over a minimum of five years, through a combination of capital growth, which is profit on an investment, and income, which is money paid out from an investment such as interest and dividends. The Fund is actively managed, which means the Investment Manager decides which investments to buy and when, and will invest at least 80% in other collective investment schemes, investment trusts and exchange-traded funds.

Market

2025 commenced with an eventful but widely positive month for both equity and bond markets.

The MSCI All-Country World Index of global equities was up +4.2% in January, shaking off a significant wobble in large Artificial Intelligence related stocks caused by news that a Chinese company had developed a competitor to AI leader ChatGPT, called DeepSeek, at what they claimed to be a fraction of the cost due to significantly lower memory usage and computational power requirements. This sparked fears that the huge growth expectations that have been baked into a number of the Magnificent Seven's share prices may be less than certain going forward. The S&P 500 Index still ended the month up +3.6% in Sterling terms.

European equities were the surprise leader in January, bouncing back from a lacklustre 2024 despite continued weak economic data from Germany as it was announced that its economy had shrunk for the second consecutive year. The MSCI Europe ex-UK Index was up an astonishing +8.3% for the month, seemingly buoyed by the absence of any definitive news of tariffs being implemented on the EU by the US, the ECB cutting interest rates by another 0.25% as well as some signs of improved trading from a number of the large European luxury goods companies.

Away from equities, the Bloomberg Global Aggregate index of high quality global bonds was up +0.4% in GBP Hedged terms. Commodity markets were also strong with the Bloomberg Commodity Index up +4.0% in GBP Hedged terms, boosted by continued strength in gold and silver.

Performance

In January, your Fund returned +3.9%, surpassing its IA sector comparator which was up +3.3%. Since its launch on 22nd July 2019, the Fund has generated cumulative returns of +42.2%, almost 11% ahead of its IA sector comparator.

Tactical allocation within equities was marginally negative for the month, largely driven by our underweighting to Europe and overweight to Japan. Towards the end of the month, we decided to increase our overweight to Japan even further, funding that move with an additional reduction in our European allocation (banking some of January's profits) as well as through trimming our overweight exposure to the UK.

Manager selection was strong over the month. Within the equity component, it was the Fund's more value oriented managers who delivered the strongest outperformance with funds like the Pzena Global Value Fund and the North of South Emerging Markets All Cap Fund enjoying a good start to the year. However, we also saw positive contributions elsewhere as both the Lansdowne European Special Situations Fund and the BlackRock Continental European Fund outperformed the European market, despite that market being up over 8%. It was a more disappointing month in the UK, where the Polar UK Value Opportunities Fund's +0.3% return trailed the FTSE All Share Index as mid and small cap UK equities, which it is significantly overweight, lagged their large cap counterparts by a significant margin.

Although only 20% of your Fund, the diversifying component also made a positive contribution in January. Within fixed income, the Morgan Stanley Emerging Market Local Income Fund was up +3.0% over the month. In other diversifying asset classes, the Fund's exposure to commodities, gained through the UBS BCOM CMCI ETF was up over +4%. It was also notable that the allocation to EU Carbon Credits, achieved through the Xtrackers Physical Carbon EUA ETC, was up a stellar +17.0%, making a meaningful positive contribution to the Fund's January return.
